THE HARLEM RANGE EXPLOSION.

The Jury Severely Consure the Landcident Thereto. Coroner Herrman yesterday held an inquest into the cause of death of Mrs. Elia C. Campbell, who, on the morning of 28th December, at 142 East 115th street, was badly burned by the explosion of a range in the kitchen, and from the effects of which she subsequently died. Officer Graham's testimony no importance. A nephew of woman, who was present, testified that about six A. M. deceased was toasting bread, having built the fire with wood, when the explosion occurred, and the woman was badly injured and her clothes were set on fire; the fire had been kindled about an nour perore the expression, who woman died at eight o'clock the same morning. Ann L. Campbell testified that the night before citness laid the fire and found the water running in the taps in the kitchen; the water was running in the morning. Witness swore that the range was was hired from one Waldron, an agent of the owner, John Darragh, of East Fifty second street, who refused to put the house in order. John Darragh testified that he was not informed that the range was out of order; that Dr. Campbell Grippen, the party who put in the range, stated that he could not account for the explosion; it had been put in three years ago, and he had heard no complaints about it being defective; there would be little difficulty in repairing it if it got out of

Dr. Campbell testified that he hired the house of Waldron, agent for Darragh; it was in bad condition, and he agreed to advance money to put it in repair; was told that the range was rusty, but the agent would have it put in good order; Costa, the plumber, informed him that the range was worn out, and the agent said Darragh would not go to more expense. Another plumber, who was called, condemned the range; reported the condition of the range to Darragh, who refused to repair it, and threatened to sue witness for the rent he had advanced to the agent to repair it; witness leased the house with the distinct understanding that it was to be put in thorough repair.

to repair it; witness leased the house with the distinct understanding that it was to be put in thorough repair.

Hanford Horton, sanitary engineer, testified that the range was not thick enough to resist the pressure of the Croton, which, up there, is about fortyfive pounds to the square inch; the iron was only one eighth of an inch thick—only sufficient to sustain a pressure of twenty pounds; he was of the opinion that the disaster was caused by the insufficiency of the iron to sustain the Croton pressure.

Two plumbers, who had fixed the range at different times, testified that it was very diapidated and rusty, and by no means in a good condition.

Dr. Cushman gave it as his opinion that deceased died from shock and burns received.

The Coroner, in charging the jury, stated that it was the duty of the landlord, if informed of the defective condition of the range, to put it in repair. If they found by the evidence that Darragh was aware of the bad condition they could censure the landlord. The jury retired, and later returned a verdict that deceased came to her death from shock and scalds produced by the explosion of the range, and they felt it their duty to severely censure the landlord Darragh, for allowing this defective range to remain in the house after being notified of its condition.

sured by Mr. Amos F. Eno for $40,000, and the improvements upon it by Mrs. Lucy D. Fisk for $60,000. The members of the orchestra of the thea-tre lost all their instruments. Mr. Dodworth, the director, lost a valuable library. John Donell, aged thirty-two, went on the roof of the building where the Madison Avenue Stage Company keep their vehicles, yesterday afternoon, to stop the flowing of water, and fell through the skylight to the ground, a distance of forty feet. He was removed to 60 East Forty-first street. Mary Genny, aged thirty-two, German, of 303

East Tenth street, was found in Tompkins Park yesterday afternoon, by Captain Waish, of the Seventeenth precinct, suffering from the effects of poison she had taken to commit suicide. She was sent from the station house to Bellevue Hospital. Yesterday morning a woman called at Police Yesterday morning a woman called at Police Headquarters and stated that she was searching for two girls named respectively Ann and Julia McDonald, whom she states were at work in the Caxton Building at the time of the fire. Captain Kennedy, however, says that he is certain that the bodies are all recovered that were in the ruins, and it is believed that the woman is somewhat demented. She claims that they lived in East New York, and have not been seen since the fire. ART ECHOES.

Kingston. She has on hand a number of interest-ing views taken at Cherry Pond, among the White Mountains, N. H.

J. M. Hart has completed his "Indian Summer," and succeeded in a high degree of perfection in reproducing the woolly texture of the sheep. The season represented, as indicated by the title, is that in which the trees are newly bared of leaves, and when snow might be expected in twenty-four hours or might not arrive for a month. Mr. Hart intends to put a little more "conscience work" into "Indian Summer," but so far as average discernment is concerned the picture is completed. J. H. Lazarus has finished a series of portraits, among which are those of Mrs. Lawson and Lucius Tuckerman, cousin to Henry T. Tuckerman.

P. P. Ryder has quite a batch of newly finished pictures. Among them are "Good News," painted or the Artists' Fund; "A Summer Reverle," though the expression of the face given is scarcely that of brooding; an ideal head, full of thought and refinement, but evidencing no especial strength, and "Expectation," representing a hungry child with raised spoon and anticipative eyes.

There is a large class of artists, not only in this city, but elsewhere, who, nursing themselves in a sense of their own reputation, disdain to be mentioned in public side by side with those not so well known and not so meritorious. The feeling is a morbid one, the offspring of vanity and conceit It would be impossible, for instance, to disparage Dickens by allowing a paragraph respecting him to Shakspeare by coupling a new fact relating to him with one relating to Mrs. Southworth. Whenever, therefore, an obscure artist is engaged on some thing that readers may feel interested in we shall apprise them of the fact, however wounded the

Mr. A. C. Gow has just exhibited (December 14) in London "The First Provision Boat for the Besieged Town." In it the drawing power is said to take the place inadequately of the painting power. The subject represents a besieged town in the Low Countries during the latter part of the War of Independence.

"Land Once More," by Mr. C. Green, of London, is admired by the press there as giving proof of humorous ability. It is a pon and ink study, and represents a boat load of Cockneys coming schore after an hour's sail.

Mr. J. D. Linton, or London, has just completed and exhibited a picture, to which he has given no name, but which represents a woman and her little daughter bound for market. Behind them a man, smoking his pipe, sits on a cottage casement silt is simpossible to surmise the story. The finish is mentioned as unequal, and, in parts, over soit and velvety.

To a recent London exhibition Mr. Gregory contributes a few Norwegian sketches, such as "Travelling in Norway" and "Flaktorod Bakery." The instalments forwarded by Small and Kilburne are equally insignificant.

Mr. Skile is represented in London at present by not less than twenty-three bits from the Brittany coast. The principal materials consist of scraps of seashore, with a single figure (usually jemale), a sca-weed cart, a few rocks, and generally a sunny effect. One of the best specimens is "Sunny Hours," a girl waiting for the tide to leave her feet.

Mr. C. Cattermole, of London, is accused of composition and sense of the picturesque.

The late Mr. Tidey leit several chalk studies for a picture which his London Iriends would probably namesake to preserve his own proper facility of composition and sense of the picturesque.

The late Mr. Tidey left several chalk studies for a picture which his London friends would probably have admired, and which was to have represented Pygmalion before his statue as it awakes to life. If Mr. Bonface, the actor, ever plays Pygmalion in this city again we hope he will have the opportunity and the good sense to study some poetle inspiration (such as Mr. Tidey's probably would have been) ere venturing upon the delicate task. The London journals mention with commendation Mr. W. L. Thomas' "Four in the Pyrenees," a series of thirty small travel-jottings in one frame. Sobriety of color, keeping and tone and unaffected sentiment are heartily praised abroad by critics of Mr. Hugh Carter's just exhibited pictures—"Study of a Dutch Interior" and "Scenes on the Coast of Holland."

Mr. Hine's "Shoreham Harbot," on view at the London Institute of Painters in Water Colors, is praised for its quiet harmony and luminousness. Eulogy is also given to his "At Worthing" and "Herring Boats, Eastbourne."

Mr. Collier (a follower evidently of David Cox) has been creating some excitement in the English capital by his "Weald of Surrey," with its focus of sliver light among the rain clouds, and his telling treatment of sky effect in his "Hills Near Loch Awe—Twilight," and "Arundel Castle from the Park."

Mr. H. Johnstone's moonlight view, "On the Orwell," and his drawing of "Dawn," with its heavy mists hanging about the ancient monoiths of Stonehenge, have attracted compliments from more than one competent professional London critic.

Among the latest fine art contributions admired in London are Mr. Hargitt's "Chee-Tor, Derbyshire," and "The Herd Laddie;" Mr. E. Richardson's Tyrolese views, Mr. May's "Heave and Away," Mr. Carl Werner's "Fountain of the Apostless Etween Jerusalem and Jericho," Mr. Telbin's views of Venice, Mr. McKewan's interiors of Knole and Hardwick, Mr. Skinner Prout's views of Nouen, and Mr. Cromek's view, the "Crypt of St. Peter's Church, Toscanella, Italy."

The anniversary of the foundation of the Royal Academy (London) was observed December 10. Sir F. Grant was re-elected President.

The forthcoming Winter exhibition of the Royal Academy, London, will comprise a considerable number of English water color drawings by the most able deceased members, and never before exhibited.

The additional story to Burlington House, London, erected for art purposes, is completed. Mr. Sydney Smirke is the architect.

Mr. F. Madox Brown and Mr. S. Colvin, Fellow of Trinity College, are the candidates to the Slade Professorship of Fine Arts, Cambridge.

For the next Royal Academy Exhibition Mr. Hook has in hand four pictures. The first is a scene on the coast of Shetland, and contains three figures—a boy, armed with a knile, protecting himself from one of the glantic birds of that region; and another boy sustained by a girl as he leans over the precipice. The second picture is a fresh English landscape, comprising a reach in a river in Sussex; on the river a party of fishermen, with cormorants. The third painting represents kelp gatherers in Shetland. Three girls on the seashore are collecting burning portraits of Mrs. Hough, Mrs. Bishofstein, his youn

It has been found much cheaper to send work from the States and the Dominion to London and th back executed, to pay freight charges, &c., than to do it on the spot. This state of affairs is due to the great increase of late in the scale of wages across the Atlantic, and to the growing strength and power of the trade unions there."

the tag shape of a revival of his somniferous Quarterly Review. We have Vol. 1, No. 1, of what he terms the "last series" before us, and find it just as metaphysical, plucky and uncompromising as the first. The venerable Orestes informs the world that he has been under a cloud for many years, and that now he emerges from the gloom as sort of independent comet whose brilliance cannot last very long. Nobody, he says, is responsible for him, and nobody will be quicker to retire again should he find himself in danger of eclipse from the ecclesiastical authorities. There is something to be admired in the plain outspoken style of the unmanageable reviewer, but we are not sure his last series will benefit either himself or the cause he has so much at heart.

THE WEST FARMS SCHOOL WAR.

As already foreshadowed in these columns, the recent decision of the Board of Supervisors of Westchester county has not tended to allay the strife which has existed for some time past among the inhabitants of School District No. 1, town of the inhabitants of School District No. 1, town of West Farms. As already set forth in the Herald, the Supervisors declined to sanction the raising by taxhtion of the initial amount of $21,000 asked for by the Board of Education towards purchasing land and commencing the erection of a new public school, which the opponents of the project deem altogether unnecessary. Determined not to be baffled in their aims, however, the members of the Board of Education have sought the aid of the Courts, and yesterday Justice Prattissued an order directing the Board of Supervisors to appear before him and show cause why a mandamus should not be issued compelling that body to sanction the financial measure applied for.
